ister who came from England, declared the common room at the immigrant station reminded him of the "black hole of Calcutta." Aaron W. Levy, representing the federation of Jewish organizations in New York, expressed the opinion that the Ellis Island officials were "construing the present statute in direct violation of the spirit and letter of the law." He asserted that there was a "studied program of exclusion," and that the chief reason of deportation in many cases, he had found, was because "the person was destined to a congested district." He held that lawfully nobody could be kept out on this account. "The law on its face today is fair," said August G. Koelle, vice president of the German Alliance of New York, "but at New York we have an administration not according to the letter of the law. Mr. Williams has shown that he wants a harsh administration of the law. He has proved that he does not believe in a libera American interpretation of it.
